Ghost Ranch in Santa Fe

Ghost Ranch in Abiquiu was given by Arthur and Phoebe Pack to the Presbyterian Church in 1955. The 21,000 acre education and retreat center grew and in 1990 a second Ghost Ranch, in downtown Santa Fe, opened. What originally was the site of the Allison James Presbyterian Mission School and most recently, the Plaza del Monte Retirement Community, is now a small retreat and B&B oasis just three blocks from downtown Santa Fe.

For over fifty years the Church, the staff, the National Ghost Ranch Foundation and many friends and supporters have built the programs, facilities and grounds of both facilities into a nationally known education and retreat center.

Today, many congregations feel perplexed about how to carry out a fruitful and well-rooted ministry. Congregational leaders are awash in competing expectations and rising anxieties. This course will help you tend to the health of your congregation. It is for those who truly want their congregation to become all it can be. If you have only just heard about transformation, or have spent time learning about it or trying to do it, you can gain from this course. We will begin with an overview of transformation and what it is, then move on to go deeper into the role of leaders, tools and resources, dealing with resistance, and what kind of commitment is needed to be a leader of transformation.

About Heartwood

Just as arborists tend their trees, Heartwood tends to the health of congregations. We offer resources to enlighten, enliven, and enrich the lives of congregations that seek to grow in faith and service. Heartwood is about nurturing congregations to become all that God is calling them to be.
